Manulife Cambodia donates 647 helmets to Wat Preah Put Primary School through Helmets for Families

Phnom Penh, Cambodia – On October 24, 2013, the leading Canadian-based financial services company, Manulife Cambodia, in collaboration with the Asia Injury Prevention (AIP) Foundation, held a Helmets for Families helmet handover ceremony at Wat Preah Put primary school in Phnom Penh. On this day, 647 helmets were donated to students, teachers, and parents to promote road safety and to raise awareness around the issue of helmet use.

Wat Preah Put primary school is located in a high-density traffic area along a main road in Phnom Penh. Approximately 80 percent of students commute to school during rush hour on motorcycles and bicycles, very few of whom wear helmets. With this donation, Helmets for Families has provided helmets to 499 students, 48 teachers, and 100 mothers as well as helmet training sessions to reinforce the importance of helmet use and remind parents and educators of their responsibility to act as models of good behavior.

“Our vision is to help provide a better future for Cambodian families,” said Robert Elliott, CEO & GM of Manulife Cambodia. “Corporate social responsibility is not just a core value, it is our unwavering commitment. This is our second helmet donation with AIP Foundation this year. I believe that our donation today will help to enable a community of safer and smarter road users.”

The ceremony was attended by over 200 community-members, including Deputy Governor of Phnom Penh H.E. Seng Ratanak, Secretary of State of Ministry of Education, Youth and Sport H.E. Im Koch, Secretary General of the National Road Safety Committee, H.E. Poeu Maly, and H.E. Major General Kim Yideth, representative of the General Commissariat of National Police.

“This Helmet Handover Ceremony to distribute 647 helmets to students, teachers and parents of Wat Preah Put Primary School is an important step in promoting safe riding behavior to vulnerable road users including school children,” said Deputy Governor of Phnom Penh H.E. Seng Ratanak. “This event supports the Royal Cambodian Government’s effort to reduce road crashes in Cambodia; and I would like to appeal to all parents and teachers to be good role models for their students and children by always wearing helmets and respecting traffic laws while driving.”

The helmet handover celebration included lessons on bicycle riding and pedestrian safety, drawing contests, student performances about helmet use, parent remarks, and the presentation of a certificate of appreciation from the school to representatives of Manulife Cambodia. Follow up activities will include road safety quizzes, helmet drawings, essay contests, a parent-led helmet parade, community outreach, and a “my mom and helmet” forum. A training course for mothers will also be held and helmet monitoring will occur throughout the year.

“AIP Foundation greatly appreciates Manulife Cambodia’s commitment to the Helmets for Families project,” said Kim Pagna, Cambodia Country Director of AIP Foundation. “The helmets donated today have the potential to save the lives of these children, parents, and teachers now and for years to come.”

In addition to sponsoring the program, Manulife employees have participated in the Helmets for Families program by painting road safety murals at schools, teaching students how to correctly wear their new helmets, and taking part in road safety trainings for students and mothers conducted by AIP Foundation.
